

STRENGTHEN SOCIAL SECURITY

...don't cut it.

The Honorable Mitch McConnell
Republican Leader
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

The Honorable John Boehner
Speaker
United States House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

The Honorable Nancy Pelosi
Democratic Leader
United States House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Leader Reid, Leader McConnell, Speaker Boehner, and Leader Pelosi:

We write to express our strong opposition to substituting the so-called “chained CPI” as a measure for cost-of-living adjustments to Social Security and other benefits received by veterans, seniors, retirees, people with disabilities, surviving spouses, and others.

The purpose of an inflation adjustment is to ensure that the value of Social Security and other modest but vital benefits does not erode over time. The proposal to switch to the chained CPI would, over time, slash the benefits of both current and future beneficiaries. Specifically, it would cut the basic benefit – currently averaging a modest $13,500 for all beneficiaries – and break the bipartisan promise not to cut the benefits of current seniors.

The current index, the CPI-W, understates inflation because it does not adequately take into account health care costs, which are a larger part of the spending of seniors and people with disabilities, on average, than the rest of the population. The so-called chained CPI is even less accurate and appropriate as an inflation measure for these populations. The attached graph shows a comparison of current law, the even less accurate chained CPI, and the more accurate CPI-E.

One of the most problematic aspects of the chained CPI is that the cuts are larger the longer you receive benefits – meaning that the chained CPI would disproportionately hurt many women, veterans, people with disabilities, and others. For example, veterans wounded in combat and others disabled at young ages would be disproportionately hurt. Seniors, especially women, who live long lives would also be hurt disproportionately. The chained CPI would decimate the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program, because it applies to the maximum federal benefit the program pays, and thus has a greater cumulative effect.

The cuts that Social Security beneficiaries and others would face as a result of implementing the chained CPI may seem to some like a relatively small sacrifice, but the cuts quickly snowball as they compound, growing deeper every year. By age 85, the individual who began to receive benefits at 65 would be losing $984 in benefits that year; by age 95, the annual cut would be $1,392. Many individuals reaching this age have little to no retirement savings to rely on to make up the difference. Additionally, since elderly individuals living on modest fixed incomes spend, on average, $56 on groceries for a week, cuts of that size may mean foregoing food or needed medicine.

For some beneficiaries, the increase in the Social Security benefit will be completely consumed by the increase in the Medicare premiums, leaving current Social Security beneficiaries effectively with no COLA at all. No matter how it is presented, the use of the chained CPI as the basis of the Social Security COLA will be understood for what it is – a benefit cut.

While some view the chained CPI as an attractive choice as part of a so-called “balanced” package, the vast majority of benefit cuts – and tax revenue – that would result from implementing the chained CPI government-wide would be exacted from low- and middle-income individuals. We strongly urge you to stand up for the many individuals and families who count on Social Security and other federal benefits and reject the chained CPI.

Sincerely,
